Spring 416

The Gothic king VALIA gave up to Constantine, the commander-in-chief of the West. In return they received a supply of grain that would feed about 15,000 warriors along with their families and followers and he was given the task of clearing Spain of domestic and foreign enemies. The Goths had to hand over ATHAULF'S widow and provide hotels from among the nobility

The victory over the Goths brought the future emperor Constantius (the 3rd of that name) the patriciate, and made him heir of STILICHO and ATHAULF because he was Catholic Roman.

Attempts to estimate the size of the federate army from the amount of grain that the Roman military administration supplied to the Goths yield more promising figures, thus VALIA could have fed 15,000 warriors for one yr with the 600,00 bushels of grain he received through the peace of 416
